Command Operations Center Officers' School

BY CAPT. W. B. MECHLING, USN
Commanding

THE COC Officers' School is located at the Naval Air Station, Glenview, Illinois, about twenty miles northwest of Chicago. This school was established at Saint Simon's Island, Georgia, in June 1943 for the purpose of training fighter directors and was designated as the Combat Information Center Officers' School. After the war it was moved to Glenview, the first class reporting in October 1947. From October 1947 until November 1948, the school operated within the confines of one building where all classroom instruction was conducted and all practical work was held in a cramped area of simple mock-ups, consisting of one (1) CVB and two (2) DD COC's. One small problem room generated all the synthetic problems in both air and surface work for the three (3) COC mock-ups. Since then the school facilities have been greatly increased and are now housed in a building specifically designed and built for the purpose. These facilities include seven (7) complete COC mock-ups representing all important types of combatant vessels. Lecture and demonstration rooms are also located in this building. As nearly as possible, the arrangement of equipment is identical to the shipboard installations. In November 1949 a CNO letter redesignated the activity as the Command Operations Center Officers' School.

Capt. Mechling

The school has expanded its syllabus to include training in all COC functions. The course includes air and surface navigation, air and surface control, basic electronics, internal and external communications and a series of lectures on special subjects, such as problems introduced by jet aircraft and guided missiles. Every effort is made to keep abreast of modern developments and the syllabus is under constant revision for this purpose. Instruction is divided between theory and practice. Only enough theory is presented to enable the operating personnel to get the most effective use from the equipment provided. Instruction is given by means of lectures and demonstrations followed by practical problems using COC mock-ups. Students man all stations in the mock-ups, rotating duties at frequent intervals so as to become familiar with all phases of COC operations.

The school has its own Flight Operations Department, which furnishes aircraft for actual interceptions by student air controllers. The actual intercepts employing assigned aircraft are made by us.

Only 64 Passed Over Twice, Army Reveals

The Department of the Army disclosed this week that in the recent selections for promotion to captain, major and lieutenant colonel, 64 officers had been passed over for the second time, and would be discharged or retired, depending on length of service. The total number passed over by the boards making the selections was 134, of whom 70 were deferred for the first time.

In making promotions to these grades last year the selection boards passed over 173 officers, all for the first time. Since only 64 were passed over for the second time this year it would appear that 109 whose promotion was deferred last year were found qualified for advancement this year. The largest number of pass-overs this year, as was the case last year, was in considering eligibles for promotion to major and lieutenant colonel.

For promotion to lieutenant colonel on the regular list this year 605 permanent majors were considered, 518 were selected, and 87 passed over. Of those deferred, 30 were passed over for the second time and will be separated from the service. In 1948, 60 were passed over for promotion to lieutenant colonel. As only 30 were passed over this year for the second time, it is evident 30 of those deferred last year were selected for advancement by the 1949 board.

For major this year the board considered 331 eligible captains and selected 299, deferring 32, of whom 24 were passed over for the second time. As last year's board passed over 93 captains it seems that 69 of this number were found qualified for promotion this year.

The board this year considered 246 first lieutenants for promotion to captain and selected 235. Eleven were passed over, seven of them for the second time. The 1948 board deferred 18 for the first time, but eleven of these were chosen for advancement by the 1949 board.

The chaplain's board this year considered eight majors for promotion to lieutenant colonel, selected six, and deferred two, one of them for the second time. As last year's board passed over two for the first time, it appears that one of these was selected for promotion this year. For major in the Chaplain's Corps 11 captains were considered and all were selected.

When last year's promotion boards were convened the Judge Advocate General's Corps did not have a separate promotion list and members of that branch were considered with other officers of the same rank on the regular list. This year a separate board selected officers for advancement in this corps. For lieutenant colonel, Judge Advocate General's Corps, five officers were considered this year and all were selected. For major in this branch five captains were considered and three selected. The two passed over had been deferred in 1948, so they will now be separated from the service. For captain in the Judge Advocate General's Corps one first lieutenant was considered and selected.

President's Xmas Greetings

The White House
Washington

TO THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES:

At this Christmas holiday season, I am privileged to extend to all who wear our country's uniform my heartfelt wishes for continued happiness and good cheer.

Wherever your station or outpost, you are bringing home to peoples among whom you serve a genuine appreciation of your protective mission, designed to insure the preservation of democratic ideals.

Air Force Selections

Air Force boards to select general officers and those to be promoted from major to lieutenant colonel and from captain to major have nearly completed their duties. Tentative selections have been made and are now being reviewed. It is expected that the lists of those selected will be forwarded to the White House next week for Presidential action.

Air Academy Board

General Carl Spaatz, former Air Force Chief of Staff, has been appointed by Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington to head an Air Force Academy Site Selection Board, which will recommend a location for an additional service academy which may be authorized by Congress.

Other members of the Board are Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, senior Air Force member of the American Military Staff with the United Nations, and Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter, Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff Operations for Atomic Energy. Lt. Col. Arthur E. Boudreau of the Directorate of Training, Office Deputy Chief of Air Staff, Personnel, is the Board Secretary.

The Board will study reports of survey teams and make final inspections before recommending a specific location. Twenty-seven bills proposing various sites for such an academy were introduced in the last session of Congress.

At that time it was stated that the third academy would not necessarily be exclusively an Air Academy, but the appointment of the Board of Air Force officers makes it clear that the new school would be solely for air cadets.

The Board estimates that approximately 9,000 acres will be required at the site, with facilities for training 2,500 cadets under normal conditions, and 5,000 cadets under expansion requirements. Other requirements that the Board will consider provide that the location be in the vicinity of a major population center sufficient to support the academy, that adequate transportation facilities be available, that there be sufficient sources of power and water, that sewage and drainage conditions be favorable, and that there be generally favorable climatic conditions.

Although it is not contemplated that cadets would receive pilot training at the academy an airfield in the vicinity for

New Budget Attack To Boost Food Costs

Director of the Budget Frank Pace has proposed to the Department of Defense that the charge for meals to bachelor officers living at military installations be increased to $1.80 per day, or $54 per month. This is a substantial increase over present charges which range from $30 to $40 per month, covering only the actual cost of the food, not that of preparing and serving the meals.

The Budget director has also proposed that enlisted personnel be barred from working as stewards, cooks, waiters or cleaners in officers' messes or quarters. At present enlisted men perform these duties on a voluntary basis at many of the officers' messes, and in some cases at quarters of a very few high ranking officers. The employment of civilians at small officers' messes would increase the charges well beyond the minimum suggested by the Budget Director.

The proposals of Mr. Pace are now being studied by the Department of Defense and it is certain that they will meet with a great deal of opposition. The suggested increases in charges would fall heaviest on the junior officers, since nearly all the unmarried officers are of relatively low rank. Officers' messes are not only essential for bachelors but also for transient officers at military stations on temporary duty. This is particularly true of Air stations where many officers on long distance flights frequently stop over night.

The suggestion has been made in the Department of Defense that the minimum charge for board at officers' messes be fixed at $42 per month, which is the amount of the authorized subsistence allowance for such officers, rather than $54, the figure proposed by Mr. Pace. There is considerable objection to the requirement that only civilians be employed at such messes. At many of the larger installations civilians are now employed, but at some of the smaller and more isolated stations the cost of employing civilians for this purpose would be prohibitive.

There will probably be less opposition to the proposal to bar the use of enlisted personnel for service in quarters of officers. The number now authorized for this purpose is very small and these are assigned on a voluntary basis to the quarters of a very few top-ranking officers whose duties require them to do a great deal of official entertaining. In such cases it may be possible to procure the services of civilians from funds allowed for entertainment.

While the Budget Bureau proposal will be thoroughly studied the adverse initial reaction has been so great that it seems certain that they will not be approved by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson unless they are substantially modified. While no official estimate has been made as to the saving which might be effected through adoption of this program it is believed that the amount would be small and that it would be much more than offset by a substantial lowering of the morale of thousands of junior officers.

The Director of the Budget has made

Greenville, S. C. News—"The atomic race with Russia lies quite as largely in the field of scientific research and discovery as in the industrial processes of manufacture. Unification in Canada

Unification of the armed services has proceeded further and duplication of function has been more thoroughly eliminated in Canada than in any other western country, Canadian Minister of National Defence, Brooke Claxton, states in a report just released.

Mr. Claxton also reported that while "mastery in the air assumes increasing importance," it is also true that "a balanced and coordinated effort, employing naval-air, army-air, and navy-army-air combinations would be necessary in any war in the foreseeable future."

Pertinent extracts from the report follow:

Minister of National Defence

"The Minister of National Defence is charged, under the Department of National Defence Act, with responsibility for all matters relating to defence. Under his authority officers commissioned by the King exercise military command.

"Many advantages are achieved by placing all the services, including defence research, under one minister. Strategic needs dictate the necessity for a unified, long-range defence program. Implementation of such a program requires a single budget in which conflicts of interests can be resolved, and funds allocated on the basis of the country's needs.

"This makes economy possible by eliminating duplicatory or even competing functions among the services. Policies as to personnel can be brought into line in the three services, so that disparities in pay and other regulations are done away with. Proper emphasis can be laid on research when it is related directly to the three services unified under one minister. In the same way coordination with other departments and with industry is made more direct and effective.

"The test of Canada's system of organizing defence lies in the fact that unification has proceeded farther and duplication of function has been more thoroughly eliminated than in any other western country.

Chiefs of Staff

"The Chiefs of Staff Committee, composed of the Chief of Staff of each of the armed services and the chairman of the Defence Research Board, formulates plans and examines organizational and training policies. This Committee, with the Deputy Minister of National Defence attending, meets regularly to discuss matters of joint interest and major importance. The Under Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Secretary to the Cabinet attend when matters of more general interest are to be considered.

"Each year the Chiefs of Staff Committee presents to the Minister and the Cabinet Defence Committee a joint appreciation, plan and implementation program of what should be done in the next fiscal year. Coordinated with Government policy, such planning takes account both of immediate and long-range possibilities, and is constantly subject to change in accordance with changing conditions.

Personnel Members Committee

"The Personnel Members Committee corresponds to the Chiefs of Staff Committee, dealing in a similar way with personnel policy, medical services, pay, pensions and similar matters. It consists of the Chief of Naval Personnel, the Adjutant General of the Army, the Air Member for Personnel, a representative of the Defence Research Board and a representative of the civil side of the Department.

"The aim of this committee is to achieve uniformity among the forces in the regulations and conditions of their service, insofar as this can be brought about without affecting efficiency.

Principal Supply Officers' Committee

"Dealing with matters of supply and equipment, the Principal Supply Officers' Committee fills out the list of top-level joint service committees. It is concerned with eliminating duplication and bringing about uniformity in equipment and methods of supply among the services.

"The chairmanship of this committee and that of the Personnel Members Committee rotates among the services.

Administration and Command Organization

"In the Department, at National Defence Headquarters and in the various commands throughout the country, we have an organization well designed to meet the needs of Canada in peace and to provide the basis for effective action in war. The administrative, planning and training officers are of high calibre and we could enter a period of emergency with a minimum of dislocation.

"The Department would like to see a considerable increase in delegation of authority. Statutory requirements and governmental practices require many matters to be done by the Governor in Council and by the Minister which might be dealt with by subordinate officers. Within the department we are doing what we can to improve the machinery of organization, particularly in the relationships between civilian and service personnel. Consideration is being given to the possibility of securing the further delegation of responsibility and greater decentralization of authority.

"The organization of the Department is constantly under review to determine where unification can be effective and where it cannot. In certain fields it has been found advisable to leave certain functions to each service in order that a wartime need for expansion would find ready a larger organizational basis.

National Defence Bill

"An important step in unification is the drafting of a single bill to deal with all matters relative to defence and to provide a common disciplinary code for all three services. This bill is the result of two years' work in the Department and services. Its enactment would mean that Canadian defence matters would be dealt with for the first time entirely by the Canadian Parliament and dealt with in a single comprehensive statute applicable equally to all three services.

"The basis of political and military action is intelligence. Total war and modern weapons make intelligence more important than ever before. In Canada intelligence is coordinated for purposes of defence by the Joint Intelligence Committee consisting of the Directors of Intelligence of the three services, a representative of the Defence Research Board, and the Director of the Joint Intelligence Bureau working together under the chairmanship of a representative of the Department of External Affairs. Handling intelligence is as much a matter of ensuring effective distribution in consequence of appreciation and selection as it is of securing information. To this end security measures have been completely re-examined and precautions have been strengthened as considered necessary."

Push-button Warfare

"While the results of modern research are far-reaching in their effect on defence, it is agreed by all authorities that developments such as guided missiles and the atom bomb have not made conventional weapons obsolete. Mastery in the air assumes increasing importance. This is reflected in Canada's defence program by a greater portion of money being allotted to the Air Force than to either of the other services. Nevertheless, a balanced and coordinated effort, employing naval-air, army-air and navy-army-air combinations would be necessary in any war in the foreseeable future.

"Advances made in air-warfare have not obviated the need to seize and hold enemy territory. This can only be done by land forces, in whatever combination with air and naval forces may be necessary.

Main Roles of Navy, Army and Air Force

"The direction taken in the development of Canada's forces is determined by the role envisaged for each service in any future conflict.

"The main task of the Navy would be, as in the last war, the protection of Canadian and allied shipping and Canadian coastal waters. The Navy is constructing ships for this purpose—minesweepers, an icebreaker and, especially, fast escort vessels. A new type of escort ship designed especially for Canadian needs is under construction.

"The Army (Active Force) must be prepared to repel any diversionary raid on Canadian territory. Training and experiment in the northland is teaching many lessons on arctic warfare. The Joint Air-Training Centre at Rivers, Manitoba, is devoted to the development of joint-service techniques designed to make the Army a mobile and flexible force, increasingly capable of dealing with any such incursion as might be expected. One infantry battalion has been converted to an air-portable battalion. Another will complete its airborne training by June 1950. The third will commence airborne training next year and a light battery will be converted and air-trained also in 1950.

"Canada is unable to support the immense production and maintenance burden of a large strategic bombing force. The Canadian air force is concentrating on developing jet-fighter interceptor squadrons, employing the latest and best jet-fighters available. The United States day-fighter, the F86A, will fill one part of the program, and a new Canadian all-weather fighter, the XC-100, designed especially to meet Canadian requirements, is expected to make its first test flights this year.

"In addition to looking after our home defence our contribution might involve furnishing aircraft, aircrew and ground crew for many different types of air operations.

Role of Reserves

"Training and equipment of the reserves is progressively more modern and efficient. Interested and trained personnel having adequate buildings and equipment are essential for peacetime training and wartime growth."

Comparisons with Other Countries

"Comparisons with other countries are unsatisfactory because each has its own requirements and its own standards. Such comparisons are apt to be misleading unless careful account is taken to make allowances for varying exchange rates and accounting periods, as well as different distributions of the functions of government.

"The latest and best information available shows that Canada's per capita expenditures on defence are second only to the United Kingdom's among the countries of the British Commonwealth, and in the North Atlantic powers only come after the United States, the United Kingdom and the Netherlands, all of which have extensive overseas or colonial commitments.

"Canadian active and reserve forces are considerably larger in proportion to population than those in Australia, New Zealand or South Africa. Again in proportion to population the present strength of our Navy Reserve Divisions, Reserve Army units and Air Force Auxiliary squadrons are larger than the corresponding forces in Britain."

Dividing the Defence Dollar

"There are few problems of public administration more difficult than that of allocating between the different services the money appropriated for defence. A chief of staff engaged in planning for one of the defence forces of Canada for the next few years is faced with the task of producing a plan on a comparable basis with those of the other services so that a single coherent programme will be produced. After consideration by the Chiefs of Staff Committee, the programme is submitted to the Minister and considered in great detail. It is then discussed by the Cabinet Defence Committee and is subject to further criticism at various levels on numerous occasions before being put before the Cabinet for approval and submission to Parliament in the estimates tabled by the Minister of Finance. That procedure is going on all the year round.

"Each man taken on strength, each aircraft planned, each ship laid down, each scientist receiving support, adds to the money required for a given year, but what is more important, each such expenditure almost invariably involves commitments for years ahead, commitments that cannot be avoided and which can only be met by recurring annual expenditure.

"This emphasizes the paramount importance of having a consistent policy. That policy must be translated into a programme which is the basis for the estimates applicable to the next year's operations.

"Suggestions are sometimes made that Canada is spreading her defence expenditures over too many different objects—Navy, Air Force, Army, Naval Aviation, research, development—and so on. On the other hand, suggestions are made that we should extend our activities, for example, go in for submarines. How much should be spent on what is a matter of opinion. There is no final answer. What is right today may be wrong tomorrow. What we have done is to look at what is happening in the world, get the best possible advice, consider developments and act accordingly. For example, there are those who say that we should spend more on the air, even to the practical exclusion of everything else. However, no recognized expert in this or any other country suggests that the foot-soldier is out of date. With his modern equipment the infantryman was again in the forefront of the fight at the end of the Second World War."

Weapons May Affect Roles

New weapons and new developments are making such significant changes that they may deeply affect the respective roles and missions of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, Secretary of Defense Johnson told the Congress of American Industry 7 Dec. in New York City.

"We have aircraft that can travel faster than sound," he said, "guided missiles whose power, range and accuracy are steadily increasing, and submarines that can breathe under water for indefinite periods of time. And I have named but a few of the most conspicuous advances."

"This new era of weapons development," Secretary Johnson continued, "calls not only for the courage, the ingenuity, and the experience of the best minds of America, but also for the maintenance of a healthy environment under which such potential leadership can enjoy the fullest opportunity to develop and to prosper. It is the American system of free enterprise which makes this environment and these achievements possible."

New Budget Attack

a series of proposals to the Department of Defense for reducing costs—all at the expense of the officers and enlisted men of the Armed Services and their families. These include reduction or elimination of post exchange and commissary privileges, abolishing medical and dental care for service families, combining pay and allowances for tax purposes, and establishing pay deductions for a contributory retirement fund. The net result of such proposals, if they were approved by the administration and by the Congress would tend to nullify the beneficial effect of the recent pay increases. Officers of the Military Establishment appear confident that most of these proposals will be rejected.

The Budget Bureau proposal for the discontinuance of medical care and hospitalization is being carefully reviewed by the office of the Secretary of Defense and there has been no intimation of the attitude of the Secretary with respect to the suggestion. However, several of the Secretary's advisers are known to be strongly opposed to it, and it is also meeting with strong Congressional opposition. Since the approval of Congress would be required it seems unlikely to be adopted.

Takes Oath as Asst. SecNav

John F. Floberg, appointed by President Truman on 23 Nov. 1949 to be Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, was administered the oath of office this week by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

In a brief ceremony in Secretary Johnson's office in the Pentagon Building, Mr. Floberg assumed the office which was left vacant when Under Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball, who formerly held the post, stepped up to his present position on 25 May.

Air Warning Net

The Department of the Air Force this week announced an immediate start would be made on the construction of a comprehensive radar system for the protection of Alaska and continental United States.

Congress has approved this Air Defense project and has authorized an over-all expenditure of $85,500,000 for this purpose.

However, the legislation stipulated that funds for the initial phase of the program must be diverted from money appropriated for other Air Force activities and that expenditures during the current fiscal year should not exceed $50 million. General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Chief of Staff, announced that the Air Force has cancelled or reduced other projects in order to make the $50 million immediately available for this purpose.

Under present plans $18,800,000 will be utilized for construction of radar facilities in continental United States, while the remaining $31,200,000 will be for Alaska stations in the aircraft warning and control chain. Most of the sites for the facilities comprising the net have been selected and surveyed, property leases procured, and detailed plans made. When construction is completed the latest type of warning and control electronic equipment will be installed.

The project for radar installations in continental United States will be under the direction of Lt. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead, head of the Continental Air Command, Mitchell Air Force Base, N. Y.

Brig. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, jr., head of the Alaskan Air Command, will be responsible for the Alaskan installations.

Extra Pay For Medicos

The Comptroller General has issued the following decision (B-73015) relating to extra pay applicable to retired Medical and Dental officers of the Army recalled to active duty and to like Navy officers on active duty:

"Officers of the Medical or Dental Corps of the Regular Army retired prior to and not serving on active duty on September 1, 1947, are not entitled, upon subsequent recall to active duty with the Medical or Dental Corps, to the additional active-duty pay of $100 per month authorized for certain medical and dental officers by section 203 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

"Officers of the Medical or Dental Corps of the Regular Navy who were retired prior to September 1, 1947, but were serving on active duty on that date are entitled for subsequent periods of active duty with the Medical or Dental Corps to the additional pay of $100 per month authorized for certain medical and dental officers by section 203 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

"Medical or Dental Corps officers on the active list of the Regular Navy on September 1, 1947, who upon subsequent retirement are continued on active duty with the Medical or Dental Corps, are entitled to the $100 per month additional active-duty pay authorized for certain medical and dental officers by section 203 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

"Medical or Dental Corps officers on the active list of the Regular Navy on September 1, 1947, who are subsequently retired and thereafter, but prior to September 1, 1952, are recalled to active duty with the Medical or Dental Corps under either section 422 or 423 of Title 34, U. S. Code, are entitled to the $100 per month additional active-duty pay authorized by section 203 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 for certain medical and dental officers."

Handel's "Messiah" at USNA

The third annual performance of Handel's Messiah at the U. S. Naval Academy will be given on Saturday evening, 17 Dec. at eight o'clock and on Sunday afternoon, 18 Dec. at three o'clock in the Naval Academy Chapel.

The Saturday evening performance will be reserved for officers and civilians, whereas the Sunday afternoon presentation will be given for midshipmen and their guests. Because of the limited seating capacity of the Chapel, cards of admission will be required. A limited number will be attainable and information as to their availability may be obtained at the Chaplain's office at the Naval Academy.

Priority for AF Cuts

A priority system for Air Force separations and conversions was announced this week in a further amplification of the cut-back program.

Air Force Letter No. 36-26 states that no Reserve Forces officer who is qualified in a highly specialized technical field "of immediate essentiality" to the Air Force, and which requires extensive technical training for qualification, will be relieved from active duty except when absolutely necessary to reach the strength reduction imposed, or when considered to be in the best interests of the service.

This factor will be considered in the application of three priorities as follows:

First Priority

All over-age in grade Reserve Forces officers. The maximum age for each grade is:

Second Priority

Those Reserve Forces officers who have completed three or more years of extended active duty. Special cognizance of total active Federal commissioned service will be taken in the selection of these officers.

Third Priority

Reserve Forces officers who have completed less than three years of extended duty.

Officers released under the policy will be entitled to a lump sum payment for unused accrued leave not to exceed 60 days, mustering out payments (if eligible under provisions of AR 35-2490), and a certificate of service, WD AGO Form 53-98, Parts I and II.

Counting Double-Time

The Comptroller General, in interpreting the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948, ruled this week that (1) double-time may not be counted toward the 30 years' service necessary to qualify enlisted men to receive the retired pay of the highest temporary grade held between 1940 and 1946; and (2) may not be counted for members of reserve components to establish eligibility for retired pay authorized by section 302(a) of the specified Act (Public Law 810-80th Congress).

The official digest of the decision follows:

"Credit for double the time served in certain foreign areas prior to August 24, 1912, which under 10 U. S. Code 956 may be counted in computing the length of service necessary for retirement, may not be counted toward the 30 years' service necessary to qualify enlisted men to receive the retired pay of the highest temporary grade held between 9 September 1940 and 30 June 1946, as authorized by section 203(e) of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948.

"Satisfactory Federal service for the period specified in section 302(a) of the Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948 qualifies certain members and former members of reserve components of the armed services not for retirement but for retired pay, so that credit for double the time served in foreign areas prior to 24 August 1912, which under 10 U. S. Code 956 may be counted in computing the length of service necessary for retirement, may not be counted to establish the eligibility of persons otherwise within the purview of said section 302(a) to the retired pay authorized thereby."

A.&N. Club of Manila

The Army and Navy Club of Manila will hold its annual meeting at 9 p. m. on 16 Jan. 1950. All Regular active and life members of the club are entitled to vote either in person or by proxy. The Board of Directors for 1950 will be elected in addition to such other business as may appear on the agenda.

The incumbent Board of Directors are: Col. J. K. Evans, USA (Ret.), Comdr. Charles Pierce, US CG & GS. Comdr. R. F. Duelfer, USN. Comdr. R. E. Lockwood, USN. Lt. Comdr. C. C. Wilbur, USN. Col. F. G. Davis, USA. Lt. Col. W. W. Ragland, USA. Lt. Col. T. W. Tiedeken, USA. Mr. John Snure, jr. Mr. L. G. Wagner. Mr. Jack E. Horton.

Retired Officers' Assoc.

The Retired Officers' Association, 1600—20th Street, Northwest, Washington 9, D. C., announces that during the month of November, 1949, 249 new members were enrolled, making a total membership of approximately 16,400.

Care for Dependents

The Congressional counter-attack on the Bureau of the Budget's assault upon the privileges of personnel of the Armed Services continued this week.

Additional members told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that they are opposed to the Bureau's effort to legally renounce the long standing custom of providing, wherever possible, medical care for the dependents of officers and enlisted men.

Representative Carl T. Durham (D-N. C.), a member of the House Committee on Armed Services: "To take away these privileges would create a serious problem. I am opposed to it. It would affect compensation, welfare and morale, and would complicate civilian medical conditions."

Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D-Ill.), chairman of the House Rules Committee: "I am opposed to the idea. I intend to go into it and see what can be done about it. I am against taking privileges from needy people."

Senator Irving M. Ives (R-N. Y.), a member of Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments: "Wasn't that held out as an inducement for enlisting?"

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D-S. C.), chairman of Committee on Banking and Currency: "To deprive them of those privileges would be a dreadful mistake. They have had them for years."

Representative Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio): "The rules of the game must not be changed. As long as personnel enter the armed services with the understanding that hospital privileges for dependents are part of the perquisites they should be continued for them. But Congress has the right to change the rules related to new incoming personnel."

Press Hears Adm. Sherman

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, told members of the National Press Club at a luncheon meeting 7 Dec., that while he believes it is most important to develop and test new types of naval vessels he wouldn't know where to squeeze money for a super carrier from the Navy funds for either 1950 or 1951.

The proposed USS United States, he told the capacity audience which turned out to hear his address, would be a "very expensive" ship. In the meantime, Admiral Sherman said, the Navy must continue work on carrier design and must improve the ones it already has so that it will be ready when funds do become available.

A newsman asked why Captain Crommelin had not been dismissed, to which Admiral Sherman replied that he had known Crommelin for many years—they had both had their ships shot out from under them—that he had high regard for Captain Crommelin's achievements in the past and had confidence in his future achievements.

Admiral Sherman said he believes amphibious warfare will be used in future conflicts but that it won't look like Normandy or Guadalcanal. Rather, he said, it will be characterized by speed, dispersal, infiltration, and rapid movement away from the shore lines.

All-Marine Game

The All-Navy football championship will be strictly a Marine affair this year.

Scheduled to be played on 17 Dec. at the Los Angeles Coliseum, the annual championship will see two Marine teams, Camp Pendleton and either Quantico or Camp Lejeune, squaring off for the title.

The Pendleton Marines won the Western Division bid last week-end when they defeated the Hawaiian Packers, Navy team from Honolulu, 68-0. Quantico, which won both previous All-Navy football titles, will play Camp Lejeune today for the Eastern Division championship.

Dean of Law School

Rear Adm. Oswald S. Colclough, recently retired Commander of the Navy's submarine forces in the Pacific, and former Navy Judge Advocate General, became Dean of The George Washington University Law School, Washington, D. C. this week.

A 1935 graduate of the school which he now heads, Admiral Colclough was named to the post last October.

Study Nat. Gd. Bureau

A joint investigation by the Army and the Air Force of the operations of the National Guard Bureau is now underway. Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray and Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington said the investigation will be conducted by the Inspectors General of the two departments in an effort to determine the facts concerning various unresolved problems in the operation of the National Guard Bureau.

Considerable friction recently developed between Maj. Gen. K. F. Cramer, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, and Maj. Gen. C. G. Finch, Chief of the Air Force Division of the Bureau, which led to the relief of Gen. Finch by Gen. Cramer. However, this action was subsequently reversed by Gen. Cramer.

At the time the Air Force was established as a separate department the Air National Guard remained under the National Guard Bureau and in each state the Air elements of the Guard remained under the local Adjutant General. It was proposed by some high ranking Air Force officers that the Air National Guard be merged with the Air Reserve. This aroused a great deal of opposition on the part of the National Guard Association and the controversy has become bitter.

The purpose of the current investigation will be to determine the status and responsibilities of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau with respect to the Army and the Air Force. The Inspectors General will also inquire into the circumstances surrounding the controversy between Generals Cramer and Finch.

The directive of the two Secretaries to the Chief of Staff of the Army and the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, ordering the investigation, follows:

"1. It is desired that a joint inquiry, to include formal investigation to the degree considered necessary, be initiated by the Inspectors General of the Army and the Air Force as soon as practicable to determine:

"a. The status of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau with respect to the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff of the Army.

"b. The status of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau with respect to the Secretary of the Air Force and the Chief of Staff of the Air Force.

"c. The status of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau with respect to the Air Force functions of the National Guard.

"d. The status of the Chief of the National Guard Bureau with respect to the Army functions of the National Guard.

"e. The status of the Chief of the Air Force Division and of the Chief of the Army Division of the National Guard Bureau.

"f. The circumstances leading up to the relief of Maj. Gen. C. G. Finch, Chief of the Air Force Division of the National Guard Bureau, by Maj. Gen. K. F. Cramer, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, and the subsequent withdrawal of that action by General Cramer.

"2. In furtherance of the expeditious completion of this inquiry, it is especially desired that there be made available to the respective Inspectors General on request such personnel as they may desire to appear before them as witnesses, and such records and documents as may have a bearing on the subject of inquiry.

"3. It is also desired that the respective Inspectors General submit to the undersigned a joint report of the results of their inquiry. In case of disagreement as to facts, conclusions or recommendations, separate individual reports will be appended to the joint report."

Supersonic Wind Tunnel

A new Naval supersonic wind tunnel, designed to operate at speeds up to 3,000 miles an hour, was formally dedicated on 1 Dec. at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Cambridge.

Constructed with funds provided by the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, the new tunnel will be used for testing scale models of supersonic missiles and components and for research to obtain basic aeroballistic information. It has been under construction since June 1947.

Among those who participated in the dedication ceremony were Rear Adm. A. G. Noble, Chief of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance; Dr. James R. Killian, jr., President of the Institute; Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, Head of the Department of Aeronautical Engineering at M.I.T., and Professor John R. Markham, Director of the project.

Cuts in Army

As a part of the current program for the reduction of the strength of the Army the Fifth Division, now stationed at Ft. Jackson, S. C., will be inactivated on 1 May 1950, and Camp Gordon, Ga., will be closed in about a year or a year and a half.

The Fifth Division has been used as a recruit training organization since 15 July 1917, but because of planned reductions in the Army it will be no longer needed for this purpose. No trainees will be received by the division after 2 Jan. 1950.

It had been planned to move the Fifth Division to Camp Gordon for temporary station prior to inactivation, but this transfer has been cancelled because of the decision to close that post.

Camp Gordon is located near Augusta, Ga., and houses the Signal Corps School and the Military Police School. The Signal Corps School will return to Ft. Monmouth, N. J., but the new location of the Military Police School has not yet been chosen.

USMA Football

J. Dan Foldberg of Dallas, Tex., has been elected Captain of the 1950 West Point football squad.

The aggressive 6' 1", 185 lb. wingman was an outstanding performer for Army the past two seasons. He was a particularly adept receiver this fall, catching five of Arnold Galiffa's passes for touchdowns. In the words of Coach Blaik, "His receiving in the Navy game was the best I have seen all season."

Dan, who is a brother of former Army all-America end Hank Foldberg, played two years of football at Sunset High and played freshman football at Texas A & M prior to coming to West Point. He also plays lacrosse and basketball at West Point. He succeeds John Trent of Memphis, who was a defensive end on this year's undefeated and untied team.

Three new teams were added to Army's 1950 football schedule, announced by Lt. Col. O. C. Krueger, Graduate Manager of Athletics. Colgate, Stanford and New Mexico are the new-comers.

The schedule:

Sept. 30—Colgate University.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Engineer Posts Filled

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray has announced the appointment of Brig. Gen. George J. Nold as Assistant to the Chief of Engineers, succeeding Maj. Gen. Roscoe C. Crawford who retired on 30 Nov. after 41 years' service.

General Nold has been Division Engineer of the North Atlantic Division, with headquarters in New York, since August 1948. During the war he served in Alaska and in the Pacific, participating in the capture of Okinawa.

At the same time Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Engineers, announced the designation of Brig. Gen. John S. Bragdon as Deputy Chief of Engineers, a position which had also been filled by Gen. Crawford. General Bragdon had been Assistant Chief of Engineers in charge of military construction. General Nold will assume these duties.

General Bragdon was also designated as Chairman of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Other new members of the Board are Brig. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Division Engineer, Missouri River Division; Col. Orville E. Walsh, Division Engineer, North Pacific Division; and Col. Louis W. Prentiss, Division Engineer, Southwestern Division.

Visit West Point

The Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray and Field Marshal Sir William Joseph Slim, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, British War Office, were honored guests at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., 3 Dec.

In a formal ceremony, Field Marshal Slim, acting in behalf of the British Army, consummated the presentation of an antique silver centrepiece to the United States Army, and Secretary Gray received the gift in behalf of the United States Army. The gift has previously been presented in ceremonies at Sandhurst, England, on 19 Nov., when the British Secretary of State for War, in behalf of the British Army, and the U. S. Military Attache at the London Embassy, in behalf of the U. S. Army, respectively, presented and received the silver centrepiece. The gift was then flown to the United States for final presentation by Field Marshal Slim at West Point on 3 Dec., inasmuch as the U. S. Military Academy acted as custodian of the gift.

General Maris Leaves Japan

Brig. Gen. Ward H. Maris, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, SCAP and FEC, and Chief, Joint Strategic Plans and Operations Group, has left Japan en route to Richmond, Va., to assume command of the Virginia Military District. Brig. Gen. Edwin K. Wright who has served as Deputy Chief, Joint Strategic Plans and Operations Group since last May, will succeed General Maris.

Future of Communism

General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army, told the Public Relations Society meeting in New York 5 Dec. that he feels Communism "will lose its aggressiveness."

"Just as the vendors of inferior products," General Collins said, "must eventually withdraw to markets where they have a monopoly, the history of fanatical expansionist movements shows that they have eventually diminished in vigor and have had to retreat. In much the same way, I feel that Communism will lose its aggressiveness. This is our great hope. But until we can be assured that this has occurred, we cannot be assured of peace."

"In the meantime, Communism need not deflect us into its own path of violence and despair. Instead it should spur us to intensify our efforts toward producing a stronger, more effective democracy, with its promise of an increasingly abundant life, and greater intellectual and spiritual growth for the individual."

"Berlin Command"

On 20 Jan. G. P. Putnam's Sons will publish "Berlin Command" by Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley, who has recently returned to the United States after running Berlin's U. S. Sector for four years as Military Governor. In "Berlin Command" the General tells his own story of Soviet arrogance, and gives his own appraisal of Soviet power.

As for the Russians now, he says, "If they can't have their way, they won't play." He believes that Berliners' actions during the Russian blockade of the city "earned them the right to lead a democratic Germany" and that "their political, moral and social conceptions have developed until they are much like our own."

During the convention the Army Medical Service displayed four exhibits illustrating its activities. Outstanding was the exhibit on chloromycetin in the treatment of rickettsial diseases and the treatment and prevention of scrub typhus, with an illustrated record of tests conducted in Malaya, with the cooperation of British and Malayan medical personnel.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE third examination for licensed officers of the Merchant Marine applying for permanent commissions in the Coast Guard will be held on 27-28 Feb.-1 March 1950, Coast Guard Headquarters said this week. District Commanders are to be furnished with information about the examination "in the immediate future."

The Oregon, U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service ship, has returned from a two months' exploration trip in the North Pacific, and Capt. Sheldon Johnson reported "excellent Loran results." He said that there was "not the slightest operational trouble." Captain Johnson reported that he could easily ascertain his position by Loran but that some fishing vessels had difficulty in moving to his position with their limited navigational equipment. Coast Guard Headquarters said that "it seems probable" that use of Loran in the fishing fleets will be accelerated if the U. S. Fish and Wildlife exploratory operations in locating schools of fish prove successful. During stop-overs made by the Oregon at various coastal fishing towns, a large number of fishing vessel owners visited the ship to examine the use of Loran in both navigating and plotting locations of fish. Headquarters understands that the vessel is shortly to be replaced by a new ship, the John N. Cobb, and that it also will be Loran-equipped.

The Comptroller General has interpreted, in blanket decision B-85307, Public Law 810, 80th Congress, (Army and Air Force Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948) that Coast Guard reservists in an inactive duty status on the active list of the Reserve authorized to participate in the reserve program after reaching the age of 60 may earn and be credited with satisfactory Federal service for the purpose of qualifying for retired pay, after passing their sixtieth birthday and before reaching the age of 64.

The official digest of the decision follows:

"A member of the Coast Guard Reserve in an inactive duty status on the active list of the Reserve, who is authorized to participate in the reserve program after the age of sixty years, may earn and be credited with satisfactory Federal service for the purpose of qualifying for the retired pay provided for in section 302(a) of the act of June 29, 1949, after passing his sixtieth birthday and before attaining the age of sixty-four years."

Tighten Reserve Promotions

Beginning next month, the Navy will tighten its requirements for Reserve officer promotions.

Reserve officers selected for promotion after 1 Jan., the Navy said, must complete required correspondence courses covering basic and specialized subjects, either before selection or in a reasonable period following notification of selection.

In recent postwar years, Naval Reserve officers have been promoted solely on their records and qualifications. Under the new system, promotion units will be earned by taking the correspondence courses. Basic courses, to be required of all officers, will include such subjects as Navy Regulations, Naval orientation, and Naval command and administration. Approximately 100 specialist courses will cover different officer classifications and specialties.

Units also may be earned by completion of certain seminars, classroom courses or other equivalent instruction, all of which must have previous Bureau of Naval Personnel clearance.

Rear Adm. John W. Roper, Chief of Naval Personnel, said that "the capabilities and potential efficiency of the Naval Reserve will be greatly amplified by this program and each Reserve officer should commence at once to earn his promotion points."

In order to "avoid hardships," the Navy said, the new program will begin with low requirements, increasing progressively up to July 1951, when most of the correspondence courses will have been published and candidates will have had sufficient time to complete the full requirements.

The promotion regulations and the correspondence course availability list are being distributed by District Commandants to all Reserve officers in a new booklet entitled "Administration and Use of Naval Correspondence Courses."

The courses must be completed while in the grade from which to be promoted; they must be appropriate to an officer's classification, and may be taken while in an inactive duty status. Reservists with multiple classifications are required to qualify in only one classification.

Soviets Return Frigates

The Soviet government has completed the return of 27 frigates of the ex-Tacoma class that were loaned by the United States to the USSR under lend-lease during the war. Nine of the ships were delivered at Yokosuka 14 Oct., nine more on 1 Nov. and the third group of nine on 13 Nov. Rear Adm. B. W. Decker, Commander Fleet Activities Yokosuka, accepted them for the United States.

The frigates are of the patrol type with standard displacement of 1,430 tons and an over-all length of 304 feet. Their designed armament includes two 3-inch guns, automatic weapons and depth charges.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPSFlag Officers Transferred

Five Navy flag officers have been ordered to new duty stations. They are: Rear Admirals John H. Carson, Richard H. Cruzen, Peter K. Fischler, Milton E. Miles, and Bertram J. Rodgers.

Admiral Carson, Navy Secretary of the Research and Development Board, will take command of Cruiser Division 2.

Admiral Cruzen, present Commander of Cruiser Division 2, will become Commander of the Naval Base at Pearl Harbor.

Admiral Fischler, Commander of Amphibious Group 1, will command Amphibious Forces in the Pacific.

Admiral Miles, Commander of Cruiser Division 6, will become Commander, Cruiser Division 4.

Admiral Rodgers, Commander of Amphibious Forces, Pacific Fleet, will become Commandant of the 12th Naval District.

El Toro Squadrons Cut

The two remaining Marine Corps Squadrons at the Marine Air Station, El Toro, Calif., which are to be disbanded, are VMF-323 and VMF-452.

The third squadron, VMP-254, was decommissioned last week as reported in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. The deactivation order involved 46 airplanes and 765 officers and enlisted men at the West Coast station. First Marine Aircraft Wing Public Information Officers said that the future of the aviation personnel making up the squadrons was "uncertain." It was believed, however, that they would be absorbed into the other units on the station.

The air station newspaper, The Flight Jacket, said that the cut-back, which involves 16 of the Marines' 23 squadrons, including four at Cherry Point, N. C., "was instigated at the insistence of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson in his current economy drive."

Both VMF-323 and VMF-452 are expected to be decommissioned on 31 Dec.

Heads Div. for Handicapped

Maj. William P. McCahill, USNCR, National Executive Director of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association, has been named by Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin to head the newly-established Division for the Physically Handicapped in the Bureau of Labor Standards. The Division will serve as the staff for the President's Committee on National "Employ the Physically Handicapped Week."

Major McCahill has been acting as assistant to Committee Chairman Ross T. McIntire, retired Naval Admiral, and Vice Chairman Robert Ramspeck, former Georgia Congressman who is executive vice president of the Air Transport Association of the United States.

Top Marines End Confab

During a three-day conference just concluded at Marine Corps Headquarters, 26 Marine Corps general officers placed emphasis on new economy moves.

The discussion centered on how the Marine Corps could derive maximum benefits from public funds, in accordance with Defense Secretary Johnson's present economy program. General policy matters dealing with training, personnel, promotion, retirement, administration, and developments in amphibious and aerial warfare were debated.

Other matters considered included developments in weapons and equipment, the assignment to duty of Women Marines, and the new classification and personnel management systems recently introduced in the Marine Corps.

The conference, which was attended by more than half the generals in the Marine Corps, was conducted by General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps. This was his second such conference since he assumed that office in January, 1948.

Marines Prevent Crashes

Three Marine enlisted men at the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C., have saved the government over two hundred and sixty thousand dollars in nine days—enough to pay their combined salaries for the next eighty-three years!

In a recent safety program instituted at the Air Station, a 20-hour "watch" was started in an attempt to prevent incoming pilots from landing with their wheels up—a problem which has caused many accidents on the Cherry Point runway.

On the first day of the watch, Cpl. John J. Tramontana, of Jackson Heights, L. I., noticed a twin-engine Marine plane coming in for a landing with "wheels up." He immediately signaled the pilot with a flare gun, enabling him to lower and lock his wheels prior to landing.

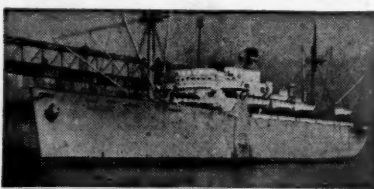

In two other incidents since, Marine Privates First Class, Frank V. Loring, Old Town, Me., and Clarence C. Hitt, Canton, Ga., managed to avert serious mishaps of a similar nature.

These performances, and "those which will assuredly crop up in the future," prove, according to the Cherry Point public information office, "that the 'Flying Marines' at Cherry Point let nothing get by!"

Marine Wins MOWW Award

National President of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association, Col. Melvin J. Maas, USMCR, was recently presented the Medal of Honor, annual award of the Military Order of the World Wars.

The award was made during the Military Order's national convention in San Francisco. Colonel Maas was cited for having rendered the most outstanding service to the National Security during the previous year.

ing the radar information presented in the COC mock-ups. This radar information is obtained from the four (4) radars mounted outside the COC building. Three (3) radars are mounted on 100 foot towers, and one (1) on the building's roof. The radars are all air search types and consist of the SX, SR-6, SP and AN/TPS-1B. When the weather is unsuitable for flight operations, special training devices are available that closely simulate actual aircraft maneuvers and present the data to the radar scopes in the COC mock-ups so that training can continue in spite of bad weather. All surface control, of course, has to be simulated, but again, synthetic training devices designed to reproduce surface maneuvers furnish realistic practical training.

The length of the course is sixteen (16) weeks for naval officers and fourteen (14) weeks for Air Force officers. The Air Force Officers' course is shorter because the surface control and surface navigation phases of the course are eliminated. Air Force officers receive two additional weeks of instruction in air control at the Tyndall Air Force Base in Florida on completion of their instruction at Glenview. A new class is enrolled approximately every eight weeks and normally consists of from thirty (30) to thirty-five (35) naval officers and eight (8) to ten (10) Air Force officers. The naval officer classes are about equally divided between aviation and deck officers. In addition to these regularly scheduled classes, the school has been conducting two-week refresher courses for Volunteer Reserve COC Officers performing their annual active training duty. This course is repeated at regularly scheduled intervals and whenever the various naval districts are able to assemble a sufficient number of ex-COC officers to make it worthwhile to give the course.

In the past, students have been recommended for assignment to this school by various commands on a quota basis. Now, officers having the basic qualifications may request this training from the Bureau of Naval Personnel through proper channels. It is being considered to issue ALNAVS at regular intervals announcing the date of convening classes and giving further information on submission of requests and eligibility requirements. There has been an apparent reluctance on the part of officers to volunteer for or request this training for various reasons. Questionnaires completed by recent graduates of this school have unanimously indicated their appreciation of the value of the knowledge gained and have specifically stated that they were pleased to have had the opportunity to receive COC training.

The present staff officer complement is forty-seven (47), of whom twenty-three (23) are in the Training Department, nine (9) in Flight Operations, and six (6) in Electronics Maintenance. The thirty-eight (38) officers of these three departments are all intimately connected with training, leaving only nine (9) officers performing the necessary administrative functions. The allowance of enlisted personnel for the school is one hundred and ninety-seven (197). The great majority are technicians concerned with the operation and maintenance of the training facilities and aircraft. The rest are general service ratings engaged in house-keeping duties.

The average graduate is thoroughly grounded in both theory and practice so that, with a reasonable amount of operational experience, he should develop into an efficient COC Officer and Air Controller. Since the scope of the training includes, in a very practical way, almost every phase of modern naval warfare, it is believed that young officers will find that attendance at the COC School is most useful in fitting them for more responsible duties and eventual command of a combatant unit of the service.

Return to El Toro

Cargo, mail and passenger hauling Leathernecks of Marine Transport Squadron-352 have begun to arrive at their new home, El Toro Marine Air station, Calif. The unit is returning from their former base in the Hawaiian Islands by air and sea. The flight crews and key personnel are flying back in their squadron's planes while the remaining Leathernecks and the unit's heavy equipment are being transported on the USS Gen. Butner.

Since Oct. 1948, the far-flying squadron has been attached to the Pacific Division of the Military Transport Service. Their planes and crews were used to replace those sent by the Navy and Air Force to participate in the Berlin Airlift. During their more than 25,000 hours flown for MATS they have ferried 1400 air-evacuation patients in their giant four-engine Douglas Skymaster planes from Guam to Hickam AFB. More than 2100 patients have been airlifted from the Hawaiian Islands to the mainland by VMR-352.

150-Ton Pressure Vessel

A 150-ton pressure vessel, built by The Babcock & Wilcox Company for the testing of underwater equipment at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md., and now installed there, will simulate ocean water pressures down to a depth of half a mile below the surface.

The vessel is a heavy horizontal cylindrical shell of steel plate, with one end sealed permanently and the other closed by a door lifted hydraulically. Three seven-inch ports of heavy glass along the sides of the shell allow observation of the interior while testing is taking place. Certain underwater apparatus and instruments which are exposed to high pressure and other submarine equipment such as divers' suits, can be tested in the vessel.

Convair XP5Y U.S. Navy Flying Boat

New U.S. Aircraft Engine

Navy sponsors most powerful propeller-type engine ever cleared for flight!

A new American aircraft engine—the most advanced type in the world—is now revealed by the U. S. Navy. It's the new Allison XT40 turbo-prop which develops more horsepower per pound of weight, with good fuel economy, than any propeller-type engine ever built by any nation. The engine currently is rated at 5500 horsepower.

The new Allison turbo-prop will enable any propeller-driven aircraft—for the military services or commercial airlines—to fly faster and carry increased pay loads over longer distances at higher altitudes.

This outstanding performance is accomplished through the engine's high power, small size and light weight. Yet, fuel economy comparable to the best present-day commercial engines is retained.

Horsepower-to-weight ratio, including extension shafting and reduction gear, is double that of our best present-day reciprocating engines—actually more than two horsepower per pound of engine weight.

The new Allison XT40, consisting of two super-powered gas turbines, achieves these important results through high-compression ratio and the flexibility of the twin power plant.

By outperforming reciprocating engines now in use, this new turbo-prop engine becomes a highly valuable stablemate for the turbo-jet engines which power today's very high speed military airplanes. Both these turbine-type engines use the same low-grade, readily available fuel; they do not need high-octane aviation gasoline.

The ease and flexibility of installation of this type engine are demonstrated by its first application in the Navy XP5Y Convair flying boat. Designers can utilize this compact, more powerful engine in all types of aircraft—to both military and commercial—to gain improved range and performance.

Once more Allison, a world leader in aircraft engine development and production, has made an outstanding contribution to help keep America first in the air.

CAC Anniversary

Marked gains in Air Defense, Air Reserve and Tactical Air Support during the last year were recounted by Headquarters, Continental Air Command, 1 Dec. on the occasion of its first anniversary at Mitchel AFB, New York.

A Headquarters statement said:

"There has been a decided speed-up in all phases of air defense including the effective beginning of a nationwide air raid warning system.

"A new Air Reserve program, introduced last July, is designed to provide training pay for over 77,000 Air Force reservists—more than double the number who were authorized such pay a year ago.

"Jet aircraft have successfully demonstrated their ability to perform in close support of ground troops."

Activated on 1 Dec. 1948, the USAF's Continental Air Command was given three major missions: the Air Defense of the continental United States, maintenance of the Air Force Reserve at a state of readiness, and tactical air support of ground and amphibious forces.

In air defense, a warning system to key-point air raid warning centers has been developed and tested in selected areas. In operation, warnings are passed by Air Force personnel to central points within defined geographical areas. Further warning to cities and towns within that area will be a responsibility of civil defense agencies.

Under a program introduced this year, over 77,000 Air Force reservists may receive M-Day assignments, be assigned to Corollary units or be assigned to Air Force Reserve Training Centers, and qualify for inactive training pay at the new pay rates. A year ago this pay was available for only 34,000 air reservists.

Tactical Air Operations in support of land and amphibious forces played an important part in Continental Air Command's first year of activity, when, for the first time, jet-propelled fighter-bombers and light bombers were used as support aircraft for surface forces in maneuvers.

USAF Weather Service Career

A definite career in the Air Weather Service with world-wide opportunities for assignment is being offered to reserve and regular officers of company grade and warrant officers in the United States Air Force.

Rated and non-rated officers may submit requests for evaluation as prescribed in paragraph 5a, AF Regulation 50-15, 4 October 1949, and qualified applicants may then apply for placement in civilian colleges for courses ranging from one to two years in length.

Initial enrollments will be made in June and September 1950, states the announcement from the USAF Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. The program authorizes the placement of one hundred and thirty-eight officers.

Prerequisites limit applicants to officers under 37 years of age and with at least one year commissioned service. Additional qualifications include an accredited college degree with advanced study in mathematics through integral calculus, and one year of physics.

Officers who do not hold an undergraduate degree but who are nevertheless interested in furthering or establishing careers in the meteorological field may submit a request for evaluation of their educational background directly to USAFIT at any time, as outlined in AF Reg 50-15. Upon receipt of the request the qualifications of the officer will be evaluated and suggestions made by the Institute as to how he can prepare himself for entry into this or any other of the many career fields conducted by USAFIT.

Maj. Gen. L. C. Craigie, Commandant, USAF Institute of Technology, emphasized that previous experience in the field of meteorology is not a prerequisite for qualification or eventual selection.

Aviation Forum

Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker, USAF-Ret., will preside at a panel discussion to be held 17 Dec., Washington, D. C., as part of the Seventh National Aviation Forum, the National Aeronautic Association announced this week.

The panel discussion will be conducted by Dr. Leslie A. Bryan, director of the Institute of Aviation of the University of Illinois, on the utilization of aviation services and the products of the aviation industry in the public interest. Members of the panel are: James W. Austin, vice president for Traffic and Sales, Capital Airlines, Inc.; J. Carroll Cone, assistant vice president, Pan American World Airways System; Joseph Garside, president Wiggins Airways; Fred M. Glass, director, Department of Airport Development, Port of New York Authority; J. J. O'Connell, chairman, Civil Aeronautics Board; and Delos W. Rentzel, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Move AF Bomb Wing

The 2d Bombardment Wing now based at Chatham AFB, Ga., will be moved soon to nearby Hunter Field, approximately five miles south of Savannah. The announcement was made by Acting Mayor Peter R. Nugent of Savannah and Col. Frederic E. Glantzberg, commander of Chatham AFB, after receiving a letter from Air Force Headquarters in Washington, accepting Savannah's offer to exchange Hunter Field for Chatham AFB. Chatham AFB is approximately nine miles northwest of the city.

The Air Force's acceptance of Hunter Field was preceded by an inspection tour of both Chatham AFB and Hunter Field by Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington and Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia on a visit 16 Nov.

The 2d Bombardment Wing has been stationed at Chatham AFB since reactivation of the base last January. The facilities at Hunter Field are more adequate and the field can accommodate more of the B-50 medium bombers used by the 2d Bombardment Wing, Colonel Glantzberg said.

The move is planned for early Spring while the 2d Bomb Group will be in England for three months' temporary duty. Numerous tenants, both business and families, must be moved from Hunter Field prior to the shift as all leases contain a termination clause in the event the government takes possession. The cost of the move is estimated at around $1,000,000.

Honor Air Officers

In a ceremony at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Col. William W. Holmes and Lt. Col. Maurice M. Stone, Air Force students at the college, were presented with the Legion of Merit by Maj. Gen. A. W. Vanaman, USAF, commandant of the college.

Col. Holmes received his award for outstanding service in connection with logistical planning in connection with the Berlin airlift, and Col. Stone received an Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a second Legion of Merit for logistical planning in the European command from 1946 to 1948. The members of the current class at the Industrial College witnessed the presentation.

Study Air Weather Service

Prof. H. Amorim Ferreira, Director of the National Meteorological Service of Portugal, and Jose Agostinho, Director of Meteorology for the Azores, arrived in the United States this week to study the Air Force Air Weather Service systems and procedures. They will spend several days at weather headquarters, Andrews Air Base, Md., after which they will visit the Department of Meteorology at New York University and the Air Weather Service Data Control Unit at New Orleans.

Gen. Ramey Honored

Maj. Gen. Roger M. Ramey, Commanding General of the Eighth Air Force, has been named Fort Worth's 1949 "Man of the Year." This is a civic award given by the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce for distinguished service.

The award will be presented at the Chamber of Commerce's annual meeting 15 Dec. at which General Dwight D. Eisenhower, now Columbia University president, will be the principal speaker. This is the first time this high honor has been bestowed upon a member of the armed forces.

The award recommendation cites four reasons for selection of General Ramey as winner of the distinguished service honor. They are:

"As commanding general of the Eighth Air Force, General Ramey has supervised a course of training and experimentation which has made the B-36 airplane, made only in Fort Worth, one of our primary instruments in maintaining peace and in the preservation of national security.

"His insistence that the famous round-the-world flight of Lucky Lady II originate and return to Fort Worth resulted in world-wide headlines and tremendous favorable publicity for our city.

"In the emergency resulting from the devastating floods of the spring of 1949, General Ramey, with characteristic swiftness and understanding, put all available resources of his command at the urgent work of rescue and protection and was thus directly responsible for the saving of many lives.

"With generosity and hospitality he has helped to entertain many distinguished visitors to Fort Worth and has made many occasions memorable as a speaker on matters of local and national interest and importance."

Survival Food Packets

Two survival food packets for air crews forced down in flight over hostile or uninhabited areas have been developed by the Quartermaster Corps for testing purposes. One packet, the Food Packet, Individual, Survival, SA-1, is intended for Arctic use, and the other, the Food Packet, Individual, Survival, ST-1, is designed for air crews forced down in tropical areas.

Weighing 1½ pounds and providing 1850 calories, the SA-1 fits into a survival kit aboard the aircraft. The ST-1 provides fewer calories—400 per day for each man—but the nature of the components is such that it is considered better suited to tropical environments. These experimental packets were developed jointly by QMC and the Air Forces Aero Medical Laboratory, at the Quartermaster Food and Container Institute for the Armed Forces, Chicago, a laboratory of the Research and Development Branch, OQMG.

Each of the survival packets for Arctic use contains one fruit bar, 2 compressed cereal bars, 2 sweetmeat bars, 2 almond chocolate bars, 2 sweet chocolate bars, bouillon, and starch jelly candy. The tropical survival packet consists of starch jelly bars as the principal component. Both the tropical and the Arctic packets contain the following additional items: soluble tea and coffee, sugar tablets, chewing gum, cigarettes, matches, and water purification tablets.

Tests to be conducted on both packets in the Arctic zone are planned for the coming winter in order to evaluate their performance under actual field conditions.

Air General Counsel

Mr. Brackley Shaw has resigned as general counsel for the Department of the Air Force, effective 15 Dec. In accepting his resignation Secretary W. Stuart Symington warmly praised the outstanding service of Mr. Shaw in connection with the complex legal problems involved in the organization of the department and in separating air matters from those of the army incident to the division of responsibilities as a result of the passage of the Unification Act.

Mr. Shaw entered the military service in January 1941 and served during the war as an officer in the Operations Division of the War Department General Staff. After his discharge in 1945 he became Special Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of War for Air and in September 1948 was appointed general counsel of the new Department of the Air Force.

administrative and indoctrination purposes is considered desirable. Consideration will be given to government-owned sites, but other requirements will take precedence.

All recommendations for sites are to be in the hands of the Board not later than 31 Dec., so that it may make appropriate recommendations for presentation to the next session of Congress.

Curriculum at Air Academy

The Department of the Air Force revealed this week that its planned curriculum for the proposed Air Force Academy will be divided into three main divisions: Science, Humanities and Military Studies.

Instructional personnel, Air Force Letter No. 36-27 said, will be sufficiently versatile and qualified to teach in more than one instructional area in one of the three divisions. Division and instructional chairmen will be required to possess knowledge of sufficient breadth to include all subjects within their responsibilities, thus providing optimum integration.

Since adoption of the plan whereby some West Point and Annapolis graduates enter the Air Force upon graduation, Air Force officers have been assigned to teach at the two service academies. To fill these positions, and to set up a file of qualified officers, the Air Force has asked for applications from those interested in staff or faculty jobs at the Academies.

The United States Air Force Academy, the letter said, will be activated "as soon as practicable, in the event that appropriate legislation is enacted by Congress."

Name Air Stations

The Air Force has renamed two of its large bases in memory of two Air Force officers who lost their lives in the service.

Muroc Air Base in California has been designated Edwards Air Force Base in honor of Capt. Glenn W. Edwards, a native of California, who was fatally injured while a test pilot in a crash of an experimental YB-49 Flying Wing on 5 June 1948. During the war he flew 50 combat missions as a bomber pilot in the European theater and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with three Oak Leaf Clusters and the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters.

The former Shreveport Quartermaster Depot in Louisiana has been renamed the Slack Air Force Depot for Maj. J. Stewart Slack, Jr., a graduate of Louisiana State University. Maj. Slack was killed while piloting the lead B-29 of a formation on a raid over Japan in 1944. His plane was attacked by a large force of enemy fighter aircraft and dove into the sea. Maj. Slack had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his participation in bombing missions over Formosa and Singapore.

New Helicopter Tested

The Air Force has begun initial flight tests of its latest helicopter, the H-19, built by the Sikorsky Aircraft Division of the United Aircraft Corporation, Bridgeport, Conn. The new helicopter is specially designed for search, rescue and liaison purposes.

The aircraft has a crew of two and can carry ten passengers, or eight litter patients and one attendant. To increase its utility in search and rescue work it is equipped with a power-operated hoist for hauling passengers into the cabin while the aircraft hovers over surf or inaccessible land areas. Provision has been made for installing amphibious landing gear. With its rotor removed, the H-19 can be carried by a transport plane to a landing field close to the scene of rescue operations.

The top speed of the new helicopter is 100 miles per hour, with cruising speed at 85 miles per hour. It has a service ceiling of 12,500 feet and is capable of carrying a useful load of 2,962 pounds. Its normal range is 280 miles, but with auxiliary tanks installed it has a ferry range of approximately 1000 miles.

AF Officer Career Plan

Air Force field sources indicate that the career plan for second lieutenants should be in effect within a year. Expression of this view followed a meeting in Washington of the newly created Career Development Board.

USAF Officers' Wives Club

Working in conjunction with the Casualty Branch of the Air Force Headquarters and Arlington National Cemetery, the Arlington Committee of the Air Force Officers' Wives Club of Washington has attended 436 Air Force personnel burials and re-interments since its organization in November 1948. The average number of Air Force funerals attended at Arlington is about four each week.

So many bereaved families have requested information on the meaning of the ceremony of the military funeral that the club plans to have an explanatory pamphlet written and printed for distribution as one of its current projects.

Organization of the Club's Arlington Committee was effected upon the suggestion of the USAF Chief of Staff and Mrs. Hoyt S. Vandenberg. It was their belief that a worthwhile service could be rendered to bereaved families by having Air Force women not only extend sympathy for the Chief of Staff, but by furnishing such practical assistance as explaining the military ceremony, providing transportation and serving as guides for those from out of town. Mrs. Truman H. Landon, president of the Club at the time, Mrs. Merrill D. Burnside, then Welfare Chairman; and Mrs. Charles L. Munroe carried through the work for its first seven months of operation, at which time Mrs. Lauris Norstad took over as Arlington Committee chairman.

Assisting the above named in carrying out the Committee's program are: Mrs. Frank Everest, Mrs. William F. McKee, Mrs. Samuel E. Anderson, Mrs. Muir S. Fairchild, Mrs. Richard A. Grussendorf, Mrs. Donald L. Putt, Mrs. Marshall S. Roth, Mrs. Charles Wesley Schott, Mrs. Monro MacCloskey, Mrs. Richard Lindsay, Mrs. Howard A. Craig, Mrs. Graydon W. Booth, Mrs. Idwal H. Edwards, Mrs. Millard C. Young, Mrs. David M. Schlatter, Mrs. Pierpont M. Hamilton, Mrs. Bryant L. Boatner, Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. E. W. Wigman, Mrs. Walter E. Todd, Mrs. Eugene Eubanks, Mrs. Earl S. Hoag, Mrs. Pearre Cabell, Mrs. Hubert S. Judy, Mrs. Arch Hanna, Mrs. Dean Strother, Mrs. William H. Powell, Mrs. Daniel Callahan and Mrs. G. P. Disosway.

Personnel changes have made it advisable to train new committee members for the coming year and newly appointed members are now assuming their duties.

Among the many letters of appreciation received by committee members is one valued tribute from Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force Chaplains, in which he commends each member for consistently assisting bereaved families by personally meeting the next of kin and extending sympathy for the Chief of Staff, USAF, and for personal presence at final committal services. General Carpenter in his appreciation stressed the fact that Club committee members attend each Military Honors service without regard to race, color or creed of the deceased.

Mrs. Vandenberg is honorary president of the Club. Other officers include: Mrs. Burnside, president; Mrs. Boatner, first vice-president; Mrs. Callahan, second vice-president; Mrs. C. A. Sheldon, recording secretary; Mrs. William J. Lookadoo, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Wigman, treasurer.

There was a definite feeling on the part of Mrs. Vandenberg that bereaved families needed some personal assurance from a representative of the Air Force that not all their sacrifice had been in vain—she felt that just burying their sons and paying the funeral expenses was not, in most cases, enough and that Air Force women should be there to extend sympathy and assistance if necessary.

The following note of appreciation, one among many received by committee members substantiates the effectiveness of this program:

"I want you to know how very much we appreciate your interest and friendliness shown by your presence at our son's burial on September seventh. It was a true act of Christian service and I am sure one that is not too easily performed.

"When one is away from family and friends on such occasion, it means much to feel that others care and you made us have just that feeling—thank you again and may God bless you in this service to others."

"The Army and Navy Journal is established in the interests of no party; it will be controlled by no clique. Its independence will be absolute. Avoiding all personal and political bias, its influence will be directed solely to the inculcation of sound military ideas, and to the elevation of the public service in all its departments."—From Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Army and Navy Journal, published August 29, 1863.

"Our Service men and their families are citizens and they should not be called upon during peacetime to suffer hardships all out of proportion to our standards of living as citizens or as compared to Service men in other parts of the world."—GENERAL OMAR N. BRADLEY, CHAIRMAN JCS.

THE latest proposal of the Director of the Budget to increase mess charges for officers at military stations is a shocking interference with the detailed administration of an executive department. The Budget Director would raise the rates for board at officers' messes by from 35 to 80 per cent and bar the use of military personnel in the preparation of meals. For the most part the victims would be the lowest paid officers in the Services. Their duties require them to live at the stations to which assigned. They are either unmarried officers or those necessarily separated from their families by the exigencies of the military service. These officers often are assigned inadequate quarters and surrender their rental allowances. They have no choice but to eat at an officers' mess, paying the actual cost of the food, which amounts to $30 or $40 per month. The Budget Director would raise the minimum rate to $54 and provide that the amount paid should cover not only the food, but also the pay of civilians preparing and serving the meals, and incidental costs, including fuel used for cooking purposes. The proposal follows several others from the same source, all designed to eliminate or curtail privileges and customs which the exigencies of the service have made necessary for the best efficiency over the years. The Director of the Budget has been successful in ending or greatly restricting commissary and post exchange privileges. He advocates doing away with medical and dental care for military families. He wants to establish a contributory retirement system and to combine pay and allowances in a single compensation item, in order that it all may be subject to Federal income tax. The danger is that in an endeavor to save a few dollars at the expense of military personnel the Budget Director, if successful, will do irreparable damage to Service morale. The Secretary of Defense should act promptly to prevent this encroachment on his authority and responsibilities.

SOMEWHAT belatedly, the Army has announced that in the recent selections for promotions to captain, major and lieutenant colonel, 64 officers were passed over for the second time and will be relieved from active duty, either through retirement or discharge, depending on length of service. This number does not seem to be excessive and supports the views of Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, Army personnel expert, who told the Congressional committees when the new promotion bill was under consideration that he expected the number to be eliminated under its provisions would be very small during the first years of its operation. The selection boards have a most difficult task and appear to have weighed carefully the interests of the individual as well as those of the Service in reaching their conclusions. Standards of military service must necessarily be kept very high, and only those able to meet them should be retained and advanced to posts of greater responsibility. At the same time elimination of well-trained, competent officers, solely for the purpose of creating promotion opportunities for juniors is not defensible. The separation from active service of ineffective personnel through application of current statutes is necessary to vitalize the promotion list and to keep all officers aware that the Army demands dynamic, rather than passive service. An even flow of promotion contributes materially to officer morale, but any attempt to achieve this by forced attrition of highly qualified personnel would backfire, and the effect would be the reverse of that intended. Fortunately the present rate of attrition, which now includes removal of officers who twice failed of advancement, is at present sufficient to provide attractive career opportunities for practically all well-qualified officers.

STRANGELY enough the anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor passed with very little public notice this year. Eight years ago last Wednesday Japanese carrier-based planes, without prior declaration of war or other notice, made a devastating and crippling assault on the United States fleet and shore installations in Hawaii, and blasted us into World War II. That treacherous occurrence changed the lives of all Americans and of hundreds of millions in other countries, as well as those of many generations yet unborn. Nevertheless, the American public, with characteristic indifference, scarcely took time to recall the event and its farflung consequences. Perhaps it is well not to foster the anger and resentment occasioned by this foul attack, but the country should never forget the hard lessons it taught. Scarcely any sacrifice, consonant with our national honor and integrity, is too great to prevent the recurrence of such a tragedy. Every avenue of diplomacy that gives any promise of reaching a lasting peace should be thoroughly explored. At the same time Pearl Harbor has seared into our consciousness the realization that under present forms of international conduct there is no substitute for vigilance and strength. While yearning for peace a disillusioned American public nonetheless expects us to be prepared for war. Weakness is an invitation to disaster. Since Pearl Harbor we have had nearly four years of war, and more than four years of uneasy peace. We still have no guarantee against a repetition of Pearl Harbor. That assurance can come only through maintaining a strong and alert Military Establishment, including related security agencies, at peak efficiency. The continuous development of such a program is a prime duty of the Republic.

Letters expressing individual views and intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. Pay of Combat Wounded

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The following quotation from the 1939 Military Laws of the United States provides a means whereby all officers appointed prior to the first of July, 1922, retired on account of wounds received in battle are entitled to credit for all time both before and after retirement in the computation of longevity increments of their retired pay:

"1383a. Retired pay of officers: Increase for active duty. Provided, That hereafter, except in case of officers retired on account of wounds received in battle, no officer now on the retired list shall be allowed or paid any further increase of longevity pay, and officers hereafter retired, except as herein provided shall not be allowed or paid any further increase of longevity pay above that which had accrued at date of their retirement. Act of Mar. 2, 1903 (32 Stat. 932); 10 U.S.C. 686.

"The first paragraph (which is the paragraph quoted above) was held repealed by sec. 1, act of June 10, 1922 (42 Stat. 625), as to officers appointed on and after July 1, 1922, but not repealed as respects officers in the service on June 30, 1922, within its terms, by (1928) 7 Comp. Gen. 735. See also mss. decision, Comp. Gen. Nov. 12, 1928 (A-24915)."

It will be seen that a reenactment of the above legislation would, by time-honored and precedent-approved method, gradually, over the course of years, credit the combat-wounded disabled retired with a full 75% of their basic pay, and such proposed legislation would, by virtue of this approach, prohibit groups of other disabled retired who, however, are not within the category of the battle-wounded and would hence present a more auspicious opportunity for the legislation to be passed without such amendment which would, in all probability, eventually mean its denial or a status of inaction.

The above proposed reenactment might well have added to it a proviso which, in the alternative, would make compulsory, upon the application of the disabled retired wounded, the restoration of such categories to full active duty status if desired and if within the age limit for such active duty. It might be mentioned, too, that by regulation currently existing in both the Army and the Air Force, this prerogative is extended to both enlisted men and noncommissioned officers of both services, and if no suitable MOS is available to them, then the said service is required to rehabilitate and train them in such a suitable and adequate MOS. Col., USAF-Ret.

Retired Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I certainly agree with your editorial of 12 Nov. which urges the restudy of retirement pay provisions of the new pay act in regard to giving some increase in pay to officers retired for disability.

Anything that you do in bringing about action as advocated in your editorial will be deeply appreciated by all officers.

Lt. Col., Ret.

This has been a week of war in three elements, the sea, the surface of the sea and the air. It has seen used the gun, the torpedo, the ash can, the bomb and the mine. Authoritative reports from London estimated that the British and French have sunk or captured 43 U boats. Though the Russians employed land, sea and air forces in their subjugation of little Finland, it was their Air Force and Army that administered the most punishment.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The early collapse of all nationalist resistance to the Communist advance on the Chinese mainland is foreseen in the feverish preparation for the withdrawal of the remnants of the dying government to the island stronghold of Formosa, there to await possible favorable developments, such as foreign aid or an anti-Red revolt in China.

When Chungking fell last week, the third capital to go to the Reds this year, the nationalists fled to their fourth capital at Chengtu in Szechwan province. However, they now seem ready to abandon the city to the victorious Reds. Nationalist troops are discouraged and sometimes mutinous. There is little fight left in them. Advancing Communist armies are converging on Chengtu and meeting with little resistance. They are reported to have taken the salt mines on which Szechwan province depends for most of its governmental revenue.

Apparently Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has resumed both political and military control of the last elements of the old regime. He has indicated that future opposition to the Reds may come largely from partisan bands behind the Communist lines. There is some evidence that this resistance movement is growing in strength. Chinese peasants are restive under their Red rulers. The Communists have little to offer these small farmers, who only wish to be permitted to till their meagre acres in peace, as they struggle for sustenance for their families.

The Communists have achieved a great military victory, but they apparently do not have the capacity to develop an orderly government in the occupied areas. Unless they can restore normal transportation facilities and foster local trade between the rural population and the city craftsmen there will be widespread poverty and famine, with resultant outbreaks of violence.

Early recognition of the Red government by the nations of the British Commonwealth and by other countries is expected. Nationalist delegates to the United Nations this week gave up trying to obtain a resolution against such recognition and sought only some face-saving formula which would commit the General Assembly to a study of the subject. Probably the United States and some other countries will hold out for a considerable time against establishing normal diplomatic relations with the Red conquerors.

President Li Tsung-jen, the last nationalist executive of China, arrived in the United States this week to enter a New York hospital for treatment of a severe stomach ailment. He denies that his visit has any political implications, but he is generally expected to seek further support for the nationalist regime. The Chinese leader said the struggle against Communism would continue during his temporary absence and he expressed himself as confident of an ultimate victory over what he termed the Communist insurrection.

Consul General Angus Ward and a score of other Americans, including members of the consular staff and their families, have finally been permitted to leave Mukden. They are now at Tientsin and early next week will board an American freighter at Taku Bar and will probably go to Japan, whence they will soon leave for the United States.

When Congress reconvenes next month the State Department's Chinese policy will undoubtedly be denounced by many Senators and Representatives. A surprisingly large group of members of Congress condemns the administration attitude toward China, blaming Red successes on the withdrawal of American aid to the Chiang government. Some members advocate our occupation of Formosa to keep it out of Communist hands, a proposal that finds no support in administration circles.

The suggestion that a West German army be established to aid the Allies in manning a bulwark against Communism in Europe finds no favor with the West German press. Despite reiterated and emphatic denials by responsible officials of the United States, Great Britain and France, reports persist that the western powers want an army of German mercenaries to check any threatened Red advance. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of the West German Republic is reported to have said that the Bonn government would agree to form an army under certain conditions, but would not take the initiative in advocating such a course.

In Bulgaria the former Communist deputy premier, Traicho Kostov, is on trial on charge of engaging in espionage for Yugoslavia, the United States and Great Britain. Following the established pattern of such Red trials Kostov was reported to have made the usual sweeping confession of guilt. However, he subsequently broke all precedents by repudiating the alleged confession. Nevertheless, he is certain to be convicted, and will probably be promptly executed. In Yugoslavia where several Russians are being tried for acting as spies for the Kremlin the confessions were not as all-embracing as is customary in Iron Curtain countries, and the prosecution was much less ruthless, even pleading for lenience for two of the accused.

The closer economic integration of Western Europe under the Marshall Plan has resulted in a proposal by Great Britain for an economic union with Norway, Sweden and Denmark. The British government has asked for a four-power conference on a plan for freer exchange of goods and a wider convertibility of currencies among the United Kingdom and the three Scandinavian countries. A somewhat analogous arrangement for a regional trade agreement is under study by France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

In the closing days of its present session the General Assembly of the United Nations at Lake Success this week voted overwhelmingly in favor of a world census of the military strength and conventional armament of the various countries. The census would not include atom bombs or other weapons of mass destruction. Only the Russian bloc opposed the resolution which was adopted by a vote of 44 to 5.

However, the census will probably never be taken, since it was made clear that Russia and her puppets would refuse to furnish any data. In view of the refusal of the Soviet Union to cooperate it is unlikely that other countries, particularly the large western powers will furnish any information not previously made public.

In opposing the resolution Russia urged the adoption of a substitute, which would require submission of information on atom bombs, as well as conventional weapons. This was voted down 39 to 6, with 9 abstentions. Egypt voted with Russia on this recall.

Air Force Medical Service—The U. S. Air Force Medical Service will commission 200 selected civilian internes in the U. S. Air Force Reserve as first lieutenants on active duty with full pay and allowances, according to an announcement by Maj. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, The Surgeon General. Eligible to receive commissions are physicians who will be graduated from approved medical schools between 1 Jan. and 1 July 1950, and who are to begin internships between those dates in approved civilian hospitals.

Physicians who are so commissioned will serve two years of active duty for each year of internship as commissioned U. S. Air Force Reserve officers at Air Force medical installations. Complete information concerning the interne program may be obtained upon written request to deans of medical schools or the Officer's Procurement Branch, Office of the Surgeon General, Headquarters, U. S. Air Force, Washington 25, D. C.

Judge Advocate Generals Corps—Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Green, The Judge Advocate General of the Army since 1 Dec. 1945, retired from the Army on 30 Nov., after 32 years of service. General Green's plans as to where he will reside are as yet undecided. It is learned, however, that General and Mrs. Green plan a trip to Florida sometime after the first of the year.

Lt. Col. Hiram B. White has been relieved from his assignment as Assistant Executive in the Office of The Judge Advocate General and has departed for the Eighth Army in Japan. Maj. Charles J. Berkowitz has been relieved from assignment as Member, Board of Review No. 1, JAGO, and assigned to Hq EUCOM. Maj. Ernst C. Oeding, recently returned from Hq Phil Command, has been assigned to the Military Justice Division, JAGO. Capt. Paul H. Employment Figures

The Census Bureau this week reported that the number regularly employed in the United States during November totaled 59,518,000, an increase of 517,000 over October, but a decline of 265,000 as compared with a year ago.

The number of unemployed was estimated at 3,409,000 in November as compared with 3,576,000 in October, and 1,831,000 in November, 1918.

The principal reason for the rise in the number of jobless as compared with a year ago is the increase in population, which occasions a corresponding increase in the number available for employment. Non-farm employment rose by 350,000 in November, reflecting increased factory operations due to the settlement of the steel strike. Farm employment was also higher as good weather permitted completion of harvesting in some sections, and was favorable to fall plowing in the Middle West.

The census figures are regarded as forecasting good Christmas business for retail establishments and continued prosperity well into 1950. Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer commented:

"The job picture in November was perhaps more favorable than at any previous time this year."

Plan Emergency Shipping

Utilization of ocean shipping in event of an emergency was discussed informally last week at an international meeting of shipping representatives of a number of maritime countries with representatives of the National Security Resources Board, Maritime Commission, and other federal agencies concerned.

"These talks," said Capt. Granville Conway, Director of the NSRB Transportation Office, "are exploratory in character and subject to whatever formal arrangements may be set up later. They follow informal discussions which have been under way during the past year among shipping officials of the countries concerned."

"Most of those participating in these talks are men who had experience in the handling of the Allied shipping pool during World War II and who thus have practical knowledge of shipping problems under war conditions. In today's meeting they considered the questions that would be faced if an emergency should again arise."

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, General Chairman of the Sea Transport Mobilization Survey being conducted by NSRB, explained to the group the steps being taken to determine U. S. shipping availabilities and requirements under emergency conditions and to develop the best and most efficient techniques for control and operation of such shipping. He emphasized the necessity of taking into account the resources and requirements of the countries concerned.

Countries represented at the meeting were: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, United Kingdom and the United States.
